Congratulations! You applied and interviewed for a job and got it... or so you thought. It’s your first day at MindSpan, an exciting and innovative social media company founded by the world-famous entrepreneur and media influencer, Leon Tusk. Known as an unconventional leader with extreme ideas and an eccentric personality, Tusk is considered a genius in his industry. You have followed his career closely and, despite his quirky behaviors and beliefs, such as his fixation on Independence Day, his fascination with spirit animals and his obsession with Albert Einstein and time travel, you are a fan and beyond excited to work for him. This is your dream job, and you can’t wait to get started.

Dressed to impress, you arrive early at the MindSpan complex hoping to get acquainted with the facility and set up your new office. But when you arrive you are informed that you have not yet been hired. In fact, you and 11 other potential candidates have only completed Phase I of the interview process. Phase II begins today, and your performance will determine whether or not you get the job.

Needless to say, you are disappointed, but your mood is suddenly lifted when your hero, Leon Tusk, appears. As expected, he welcomes everyone and gives a rousing speech where he recounts his founding of the MindSpan Company on his favorite day in 2006. He then shares how he called upon his spirit animal, a fox, to come up with the company’s tagline ‘Expand Your Mind’ and then boasts about Einstein’s most famous equation being the secret to his success. Finally, he ends his speech with a motivational message about the importance and value of time, and leaves you feeling inspired and ready to take on whatever Phase II throws at you. Let the games begin!

REMEMBER, ANYTHING CAN BE A CLUE!
